Material Laminates offer some distinct advantages over single layer materials. A characteristic which is poor in one material, may be offset by the same characteristic which is strong in another material. Laminating two such materials together, or otherwise using them in conjunction, produces a better functioning material. Materials used in this manner possess all of the good qualities and reduce the weaker qualities of their components.

ACOR® produces dual and multi-layer laminated materials.

For more detailed information regarding the materials composing these laminates, see the non-laminated sheet goods found in this section.
